

Part II 1975-1989

These fifteen years saw 330 papers published on the subject - more than during the previous century. This period saw the history of dialysis - and especially renal transplantation - become major subjects for recollection and study.

Thorn G. 50th anniversary celebration. Transpl Proc 1981; 13[suppl 1]: 24-28.

- George Thorn initiated the dialysis programme in Boston in 1948 and appointed John Merrill to head it. With Charles Hufnagel and David Hume, in 1947 he was involved also with an early renal transplant on to the arm to treat a patient with post-partum acute renal failure. This kidney functioned for over two days, and may have contributed to the patient's survival. Thorn's contribution to the beginnings of uraemia treatment have been neglected.
